

Bill & Steve Harrison's
Reporter Connection™

The free service that connects busy journalists with experts available for media interviews.

Home
About Us
Register As An Expert
Register / Login As A Journalist
Why Free?
Other Products & Services
FAQs
Contact Us

Media Response Form

To reply to this journalist, simply answer the questions below and hit Submit. Your reply will be emailed to them instantly (as well as to us so we can steadily improve our service and prevent abuse). We'll also email you a copy for your records. If interested, the journalist will then get in touch with you directly (not through our system).

Query # 22003

Query from: Courtney Balestier, Freelance Journalist Various ,

Deadline: Monday, February 25, 2013 - 12:00 PM Eastern Standard Time

Query Headline: Seeking Ladies' Stories Of Love Games That Worked!

Query: I'm writing a feature for a national women's magazine and am on the hunt for some real-life anecdotes about games played in love that totally worked. Maybe you 'accidentally' dropped something to give that cute coworker time to catch up to you in the hall? Speed-read a bestseller after your now-husband mentioned it on your first date? Waited three days to reply to his email even though you opened it immediately? I'm looking for responses from women in their 20s or 30s who've either played a game, know a friend who has, or have had a game played on them (e.g., Your now-boyfriend took a yoga class just because you were in it.) If you think you have something to fit the bill, please let me know!

Very Important - On-Target Replies Only: Please ONLY reply to this media request if your answer is DIRECTLY related to the listing above. Since off-target replies waste journalists' precious time, anyone who submits anything not directly related to the above request risks being banned from Reporter Connection with future submissions blocked.

Question 1: Based on the above, what do you have to offer? Give me a brief pitch below.

Answer:

Last Question: Anything else you'd like to add?

Answer:

What would you like to be the subject line of your response to this reporter? You may leave it as-is with our default, but consider a better subject line which will stand out in their email.

Subject Line:

Your Contact Information (Note: info you enter below is shared only with the reporter placing this query.)

*First Name:
*Last Name:
Job Title (if any):
Company:
*City:
*State/ Province:
*Country:
*Phone1: (e.g 123-456-7890)
Phone2: (e.g. 123-456-7890)
*Email:
Website:

Query Response Preview

Are you the person who'd be doing the actual interview with the reporter? If not please complete fields below.

Client/ Spokesperson Name:
Company/ Organization:
Client Website (if different):
Client Phone Number1:
Client Phone Number2:
Client Email:

5+4+0

To prevent automated entries, please ADD up the above numbers and enter the SUM in the yellow box:
(e.g. 1+1+1 would equal 3, enter 3)

PREVIEW

SUBMIT

Questions? Problems? Feedback? Click here

Deadline: Monday, February 25, 2013

Query Headline: Seeking Ladies' Stories Of Love Games That Worked!

Query: I'm writing a feature for a national women's magazine and am on the hunt for some real-life anecdotes about games played in love that totally worked. Maybe you 'accidentally' dropped something to give that cute coworker time to catch up to you in the hall? Speed-read a bestseller after your now-husband mentioned it on your first date? Waited three days to reply to his email even though you opened it immediately? I'm looking for responses from women in their 20s or 30s who've either played a game, know a friend who has, or have had a game played on them (e.g., Your now-boyfriend took a yoga class just because you were in it.) If you think you have something to fit the bill, please let me know!

Question 1: Based on the above, what do you have to offer? Give me a brief pitch below.

Answer: I played the game of writing everything I wanted down in a life partner into a list called, "Meet My Life Partner". I met my husband on April Fool's Day 2004. I lived on Wood Street and married a Jason Wood. The afternoon I met Jason at a bar I returned a christmas gift, (unflattering PJ's an ex had given me and traded it in for sexy underwear. That day I also bought myself a heart necklace with diamonds and vowed that I wanted to show the powers that be how I wanted to be treated. Well it must have worked because that night both our friends dragged us to Finney's bar. I had just played my best pool game sinking 3 balls in a row and then I went up and started talking to two nice guys in business casual wear. The first guy recognized me as Miss Ruth from 7 years earlier when I worked at a daycare = he introduced me to my future husband. We hung out till 4am and on his walk home he knew I was the girl he was going to marry. It took him 6 months for his head to catch up with his heart.